For a long time, product centricity was the only known business model. Since the beginning of the 21st-century ICT and the world wide web in particular has been offering companies the opportunity to shift to customer-centric business models. Recently, enabled by social and digital technology, new business models have started to appear. These as-a-service models are appealing more and more to both the connected as well as the conscious global citizens.